1. An Introduction to Bamford

Bamford is a village surrounded by outstanding countryside in the Peak District National Park; Bamford is situated 12 miles west of Sheffield, alongside the upper reaches of the River Derwent.

The Derwent runs southwards to join the River Trent south of Derby; prior to Bamford, it has flowed through three 20th-century reservoirs constructed by the Derwent Valley Water Board; the southernmost of these - Ladybower reservoir – abuts Bamford.

The gritstone escarpment Bamford Edge separates Bamford Moor (around 400m above sea-level) from, and dominates the skyline of, Bamford village. Win Hill (463m) to the north and Shatton Edge (400m) to the south are also visible from Bamford, contributing to the village being surrounded by hilly country on most sides.

Bamford's existence was recorded, as 'Banford' - then a hamlet of just two households - in the Domesday Book in 1086. It grew when a corn- (later converted to cotton-) mill was built in the 1700s at Bamford weir on the Derwent. The mill closed in 1965, and its attractive buildings are now residential apartments. In the 1800s the Moore family, the mill's owners, built houses for mill workers; consequently, Bamford has more terraced housing than is usual in a Peak District village.

The Derwent is not navigable; significant transport infrastructure arrived in 1894 with the opening of the Midland Railway's Manchester-Sheffield route including a station at Bamford. This made it practical for Sheffield industrialists to live in the village, and villas from that era near the station reflect this introduction of new money.

Towards the south-east corner of Bamford, at the top of Saltergate Lane, is the water-treatment works, built in the early 1900s. It processes water from the three reservoirs north of Bamford before supplying it, via underground aqueducts, to the cities of Nottingham, Derby and Leicester and surrounding areas.

Among Bamford's many footpaths is the first part of the Derwent Valley Heritage Way, a 55-mile path to the Derwent's mouth.

Bamford has two pubs (Anglers Rest and Yorkshire Bridge Inn), three meeting halls and three churches - Methodist (built 1811), Anglican (1861) and Roman Catholic (1883). The Anglican church is mostly by the Gothic Revival architect William Butterfield; its graveyard contains re-interred bodies from the drowned villages of Derwent and Ashopton now under Ladybower reservoir. Immediately south of that reservoir is a community of several streets, built to re-house some of those displaced from Derwent and Ashopton villages; this community, called Yorkshire Bridge (after a nearby bridge over the River Derwent), is separated by open countryside from the rest of Bamford.

The Peak District National Park Authority, in 1997, designated part of Bamford to be a Conservation Area, deemed to be of special architectural and/or historic interest, with character or appearance which should be preserved - so demolition without permission is prohibited. Coursed gritstone is the area's traditional building material.

2. Some facts and figures

The UK's 10-yearly national census records Bamford civil parish's population as growing 17% over 30 years, contrasting with UK growth of 12% over the same period:

	1981	1991	2001	2011
Bamford population	1,057	1,089	1,184	1,241	2011: 609 male, 632 female
Households	404	463	524	535

43% of the 2011 households owned their home outright, 31% owned with a mortgage, 14% were in rented social housing and 11% in private rented accommodation. 11% of households had no car or van (compared with 26% nationally). 19 residents were recorded as 'Unemployed and seeking work'.

3. Local government

Derbyshire County Council, based in Matlock, is responsible for education, social care, highways (including some grit-bins), subsidised buses, mobile libraries and trading standards. The Council, currently Conservative Party controlled, has 64 elected councillors; one (Jim Perkins, currently) represents the Chapel & Hope Valley electoral division, which covers Bamford.

High Peak Borough Council, based in Buxton, is responsible for waste collection, street cleaning, housing, environmental health, licensing and public toilets. The Council, currently Conservative Party controlled, has 43 elected councillors; two (Sarah Helliwell and John Walton, currently) represent the Hope Valley ward, which covers Bamford. The parliamentary constituency of High Peak exactly mirrors the Borough Council's area; the current Member of Parliament is Ruth George (Labour).

The Peak District National Park Authority, based in Bakewell, is responsible for the planning system and for conservation of the environment. There are 30 Members of the Authority, 16 appointed by the local County/District/Borough councils and 14 by national Government; six of those 14 are parish councillors.

Bamford with Thornhill Parish Council (Thornhill is the adjacent village to Bamford) is responsible for most bus shelters, public seats, (some) grit-bins, the small village green and the war memorial; it also seeks to take a lead on issues of community quality of life. Of the 11 elected councillors, nine represent Bamford ward; the Council chair is currently Sue Beckett. Residents are always welcome to attend Parish Council meetings.

4. Local services

The only medical facilities in Bamford are the dental practice (on Main Rd), which has both NHS and private patients, and the local defibrillators, which are located:

- outside the Anglers Rest, Taggs Knoll
- inside Bamford Dental Practice (not available outside practice hours)
- at the junction of Thornhill Lane/Carr Lane, Thornhill

The nearest NHS general practitioners are the Evelyn Medical Centre – based in Hathersage and Hope, 3 and 4 miles away respectively. The nearest general hospitals are those in Sheffield (Northern General Hospital and Royal Hallamshire Hospital) and the Chesterfield Royal Hospital.

The County Council's social care area office covering Bamford is in Glossop; however in winter the A57 between Bamford and Glossop - the "Snake Pass" - can be closed by snow!

Derbyshire Police's local officers covering Bamford are based at Buxton; thankfully the crime rate here is very low. Derbyshire Fire & Rescue Service have two fire stations close to Bamford, in Hathersage and Bradwell; both are unstaffed, instead using on-call firefighters.

Bamford Primary School, located in the village centre and run by the County Council, has nearly 100 pupils, up to age 11; the School would be pleased to give new parents a tour of the school. The government's Office for Standards in Education rates both this school and the nearby Pre-school as Good. Bamford Pre-school is a small, friendly playgroup for children aged 2-4; its fun and nurturing environment helps them to learn through play and prepare for school.

Bamford Pre-school

The nearest school for 11-16 year olds is Hope Valley College (in Hope village) where adult and community education is also available. Sixth form students generally go to Lady Manners School in Bakewell, or into Sheffield.

The County Council's mobile library visits Bamford four-weekly, stopping at 3 places - Main Road, Brentwood Road and Taggs Knoll.

The only public carpark in Bamford (but it's a long way north of the village centre) is at Heatherdene, alongside Ladybower reservoir; it is owned by Severn Trent.

The Borough Council's household bin-emptying is on an alternate-week cycle. The brown bin, green-lidded bin, box and red bag are emptied one week and the black bin the following week.

Digital Derbyshire, a partnership between the County Council and British Telecommunications, is aiming by 2018 to provide fibre-optic broadband throughout this area. Over half of Bamford parish (the most central part, mainly) has now been connected; a date for the remainder is however not imminent.

The local magazine Bamford News is published monthly, and there is village information at www.bamfordvillage.co.uk. Wider local news is in the daily Sheffield Star, the Derbyshire Times published weekly in Chesterfield, and the Peak Advertiser published in Bakewell fortnightly.

5. Public transport

Bamford station (which has a car-park) is served by approximately 16 trains per day in each direction; trains to Sheffield and Manchester take 25 and 55 minutes respectively and, by changing at Sheffield, Bamford is under 3 hours from London St Pancras. The Hope Valley Railway Users Group campaigns for an improved timetable.

Bamford has the following bus routes; their frequencies vary from once-weekly to hourly.

100 Yorkshire Bridge-Bamford-Bakewell Lady Manners School

101 Castleton-Bamford(stops only on A6187)-Bakewell Lady Manners School

174 Castleton-Bamford(stops only on A6187)-Hathersage-Baslow

271 Castleton-Bamford(station, also 1 journey serves village)-Hathersage-Hallamshire Hospital-Sheffield

272 Castleton-Bamford(station, not village)-Hathersage-Sheffield
